This exciting horse trail takes you through the High Atlas Mountains and close to the towering flanks of Jbel (Mount) Toubkal, at 4,167m the highest mountain in North Africa. These stunning mountains and valleys are a world apart from the bustle of Marrakesh and it is a place of peace and seclusion. Here you will see people, villages and a way of life which is unchanged for centuries.

This is the most challenging of all the Moroccan trails because it involves a lot of climbing and some of it on foot. You need to have good physical strength but will be rewarded by spectacular mountain scenery.

The following is the proposed itinerary but please note that changes are possible due to weather and local conditions. On occasions the trail may also run in reverse.

It is possible that camping nights might be replaced by staying with a local family.
